

Chaperone Training

2 hour in house session

The level of training that non-clinicians have been given in order to provide effective chaperoning is highly variable, ranging frequently from no training at all, to others having formal training programmes. The MDU, in August 2010 restated the need for chaperones to have had some form of 'formal training'. Advice from both the BMA and MDU is not always black and white, and this course provides a clear strategy for practices to adopt. It works best when attended by chaperones, nurses, a GP or two and a manager: the whole practice team potentially!

This enjoyable, highly interactive session is a mixture of practical exercises and discussion which will give you an understanding of the role of a chaperone and will increase your confidence

At the end of this session participants will:-

- Understand the reasons for chaperoning and when it should happen
- Identify ways to ensure dignity, choice and confidentiality for the patient
- Be able to identify who may need/require chaperoning
- Understand how chaperoning should be carried out and who can be a chaperone
- Identify ways to support patients effectively during an intimate examination
- Understand how chaperoning is related to policy, legislation and record keeping

To book please call Jackie on 07966 617130 or email:
Jackie.spotonsolutions@gmail.com

www.spotonsolutions.org.uk

Feedback received from December sessions

- I feel so much more confident and able to understand more from the patients point of view
- Great interactive session I will feel happier chaperoning following this session
- I now understand the need for chaperoning very interesting, good discussions
- Very useful and interesting, this training has given me more confidence